

The FESPA Print Census 2026 reports are now available.

We are pleased to share the new FESPA Print Census reports, which give insight into three areas now influencing the future of print production.

The Sustainability report shows that while many businesses recognise the importance of sustainability, far fewer have yet turned that intent into measurable results or clear customer communication of their progress.

The Automation report highlights that automation is increasingly seen as essential to protect margin, speed and consistency, but many smaller businesses are still delaying action because of time and budget pressures.

The Artificial Intelligence report shows that interest in AI is growing across the sector, but implementation remains uneven, with many companies still unsure where to begin and are looking for low-risk, practical entry points.

The Executive Report provides an overall summary and offers a good place to start.
